

A BOOK APART

Dear Reader—

You hold in your hands our second brief book for people who make websites. Its pages are few but each is golden. For here, in the most concise form possible, is a direct line to the mind and expertise of Dan Cederholm—designer, community creator, teacher, innovator, entertainer, and profound expert in all things to do with CSS and great design on the web.

We founded A Book Apart on the knowledge gained from decades of lived experience that web design is about multi-disciplinary mastery and laser focus—and the resulting premise that web designers are best served by highly detailed and meticulously edited examinations of single topics. Our little books are rich single servings, and nothing could be richer than the combination of CSS3's power, and Dan Cederholm's deep subject mastery and subtle, frothy wit.

Thank you for believing in A Book Apart, and thank you even more for doing your part to create a web of great experiences powered by fine design and well-used web standards. We love you for it. Enjoy this book.

Yours,
